WHO PAYS FOR EXTENDED AND EMERGENCY UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS?

You’ve heard the news that our unemployed workers will get more unemployment benefits. Who will pay for it? What does this mean to you?

Emergency Unemployment Compensation - Under state law, an unemployed worker is entitled to receive up to 26 weeks of regular unemployment benefits. In the current economy, many more workers are staying unemployed for longer periods. For this reason, Congress and the President approved an extended-benefit program, known as Emergency Unemployment Compensation (EUC), which pays up to an additional 33 weeks of benefits in our state. EUC benefits are paid by the federal government, not you.

Extended Benefits - Due to the state’s high unemployment rate, Washington is now in an extended benefit period, so we are paying up to an additional 13 weeks of benefits to eligible claimants running out of their EUC. Extended benefits are financed a little differently than EUC benefits, although regular taxable employers will not be charged for them.

Stimulus packages - Additionally, state and federal economic stimulus packages have been passed that temporarily increase unemployment benefits.

The state package, signed into law on February 16 and taking effect on May 3, 2009, affects unemployment benefits in two ways. First, it temporarily increases the minimum weekly benefit from $129 to $155. In addition, it increases the weekly benefit amount for most people by $45, as of the date this publication went to print. Proposed legislation could change the amount. This is funded from the state’s Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund. However, we will not charge these benefits against regular taxable employers’ accounts and this will not trigger rate increases. Reimbursable employers will be responsible for these additional benefits.

The federal stimulus package temporarily increases unemployment benefits by an additional $25 a week beginning the week of February 22, 2009. These benefits are federally funded and will not be charged to all employers nor paid from the state trust fund.

We cannot calculate how your former employees' unemployment benefits will affect you since we don’t know how long an employee will claim benefits, your future taxable payroll, etc. We can tell you that layoffs from now through June 30, 2009, will not affect your tax rate until 2010.

FOCUSED AUDITS

The Employment Security Department is initiating an audit program to help ensure that employers are complying with all applicable laws and rules. This focused audit program is designed to do two things: to ensure that eligible laid-off workers have access to unemployment benefits as quickly as possible and to instruct employers about tax liability and proper reporting.

When a worker files an unemployment claim, his or her benefits are established based on reports submitted by an employer. If an employer has submitted inaccurate reports, the information is not available to establish an unemployment claim. This leads to delays in providing benefits.

To support these two important audit outcomes, the Focused Audit Program will focus (continued on back)
IRS 940 CERTIFICATION OR RECERTIFICATION

Each year, the department certifies to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) the unemployment tax rate, amount of taxable wages and amount of tax paid by each employer two years earlier. For example, Employment Security will compare 2007 data with the IRS in 2009. We compare the wages reported to the IRS on Form 940 or on 1040 Schedule H to wages reported in Washington for unemployment insurance purposes.

If the certification shows a discrepancy between the state records and the federal records, the IRS either contacts us for a recertification or contacts the employer directly. In order to respond to requests from the IRS, the employer may request a recertification from ESD.

Most problems occur when employers fail to notify Employment Security about a change in business structure (entity) or a change in Federal Employer Identification Number (FEIN). The FEIN reported to the IRS must match what we have in our tax and wage files. If there is no match, the IRS charges the employer the maximum Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) rate of 6.2 percent instead of the reduced rate of 0.8 percent.

If you receive an inquiry from the IRS and you have questions about the reported information or need a FUTA Certification, please contact:

What is a customer identification number?
Several months ago, Employment Security gave claimants a unique customer identification (CID) number. We made this change to help reduce identity theft, and it should have a minimal effect on employers.

If we send you a form about an unemployment benefit claim, we will always use the claimant’s Social Security number. If we send a document only to a claimant, we use the CID.
