Protect your tax rate for 2010

To avoid being assigned the highest possible tax rate in 2010, your account must be current by September 30, 2009. If your account is delinquent on October 1, you may receive the highest tax rate for the entire following year.

The delinquent-tax rate for 2009 is 6.23 percent. We will notify you of your 2010 tax rate in December 2009. Assigned tax rates are in effect for the entire year.

If you cannot make full payment now, you may request a payment plan by calling your district tax office. You will receive your earned tax rate for 2010, rather than the delinquent-tax rate, if we approve your payment plan before September 30, 2009.

Changes to unemployment-insurance tax rates for 2010

For most employers, unemployment-insurance tax rates are relatively stable and do not change much from year to year. Next year will be different.

The enormous increase in unemployment in 2009 will affect 2010 tax rates for many employers. If employees received benefits that were chargeable to specific employers, it will affect the individual employers’ experience rating and, ultimately, increase their rates. The effect is averaged over a four-year period through June 2009.

In addition, the Legislature enacted SSB 5963 this year to fix a problem with state law not being in “conformity” with federal unemployment-insurance law. This law has three changes that could affect rates.

First, SSB 5963 ends the practice in which benefits were based on the two highest quarters in a year, while each employer’s “experience” (the basis for your rate) was based on all four quarters. Under the old law, the difference in these calculations had been shared (socialized) among all employers. Under the new law, we will assign experience based on two quarters. Experience for the four years prior to this change will be reflected in the 2010 tax rate.

Second, SSB 5963 reduces the tax rate for all but two rate classes and reduces the total combined tax rate that could be assessed. For many employers, the increase in your experience tax rate that is based on the change to two-quarter averaging will be offset by the reduction in most tax rates. However, your own tax rate will depend on your particular circumstances.

Third, SSB 5963 reduces the tax rates for socialized costs of unemployment insurance. Although you will pay less than you would have otherwise, the amount you pay will depend on the size of the unemployment-insurance trust fund and on your own experience.

Although it is difficult to predict the combined effect of these changes on individual employers, we know 2010 will bring changes to a large number of Washington’s businesses.

Quarterly wage-detail report

Have you noticed the new change to Form 5208B? Item-by-item instructions for block 13 (Other State) now say “list one other state, if any, in which you also paid this employee wages during this year.” For example, if an employee worked in Oregon,

IRS 940 certification or recertification

Each year, we certify to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) the tax rate, amount of taxable wages and the amount of unemployment tax paid by each employer for the two prior years.

We compare the wages reported to the IRS on Form 940 or on 1040 Schedule H to wages reported to Washington for unemployment-insurance purposes. If the certification shows a discrepancy between the state records and the federal records, the IRS either contacts us for a recertification or contacts the employer directly. In providing information to the IRS, you may request a recertification from our department.

Most problems occur when employers fail to notify us of a change in business structure or a change in the federal Employer Identification Number (EIN). The EIN needs to match what we have in our tax and wage files. If there is no match, you will be charged the maximum Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) rate of 6.2 percent instead of the standard 0.08 percent.
